EDITORIAL FOR VOL. 13-2 (2020)

The Journal Quaestio Iuris, indexed on the Web of Science, quarterly, in this volume 13, number 02, 2020, is pleased to inform all its readers that the article by Miguel Beriain, I. ; Lazcoz, G. (2018), “The Oviedo Convention, twenty years after its signature. Some suggestions for amendment ”, published in Journal Quaestio Iuris, n°. 11, 1, pp. 445-46, was cited in the article “The international sharing of personal data concerning health in times of the COVID-19: Ethical and legal issues for the impulse of a necessary cooperation” by Mikel Recuero Linares, from University of the Basque Country, Spain, published in the Journal of Bioethics and Law of the University of the Basque Country, Spain, <https://revistes.ub.edu/index.php/RBD/article/view/31711>.

The journal is also pleased to publish the article “Gender discrimination in brazilian labor market and the role of the private sector”, by Irene Pietropaoli, Research Fellow in Business and Human Rights for the British Institute of International and Comparative Law - United Kingdom and Narciso Leandro Xavier Baez, Academic coordinator at the University of the West of Santa Catarina - UNOESC.

The article “Gender discrimination in brazilian labor market and the role of the private sector” seeks to discuss gender discrimination in the labor market in Brazil and to understand the role that the private sector plays in sustaining and combating gender inequality and disparity wage. This is done through the analysis of the main problems and challenges for achieving full gender equality. It is a study in the field of law, economics and social sciences. The article first reviews the history of gender equality in Brazil, highlighting current problems and advances, particularly in the area of legal protection for women workers. Then, it discusses the current issues of gender inequality and wage disparities at work in Brazil and analyzes the reasons for the persistence of such inequality. Finally, the article discusses the role of the private sector both in supporting gender discrimination and in promoting gender equality. This article recognizes the advances in gender equality achieved in Brazil in the past two decades, but considers that discrimination is the key persistent issue that needs to be addressed to completely eradicate this problem. In particular, special attention must be paid to the role of the private sector - something that has been overlooked in Brazil so far.

In the same way as in the previous issues, in the current volume 13, number 02, 2020, we publish 15 (fifteen) unpublished articles, of which 05 (five) are foreign articles: the aforementioned “Gender discrimination in Brazilian labor market and the role of the private sector”, by Irene Pietropaoli, Research Fellow in Business and Human Rights for the British Institute of International and Comparative Law - United Kingdom and Narciso Leandro Xavier Baez, Academic Coordinator at the University of the West of Santa Catarina - UNOESC; “Ahmad Jaam's mystical, moral and philosophical thoughts”, by Saeed Reza Yousefi, Doctor of Philosophy, Academy of Sciences of the Republic of Tajikistan, Islamic Republic of Iran; “State and law in young Marx: epistemological and theoretical elements from a post-marxist approach”, by Jorge Gabriel Foa Torres, Assistant Researcher at the National Council for Scientific and Technical Investigations (CONICET, Argentina) and Professor at the AP Institute of Social Sciences at National University of Villa María (UNVM), Argentina; “The act of unconstitutionality and international treaties in the political constitution of the United Mexican States”, by Alberto Herrera Pérez, Master of Law from the University Marista, and Eduardo Alberto Herrera Montes, Bachelor's intern in Law at the Technological University of Mexico, Mexico.

We also published in our Monographs Section a study called “Conventionality control and its applicability to Brazilian Criminal Law”, by Gabriel Benedito Isaac Chalita, professor at Universidade Presbiteriana Mackenzie, professor at Pontifical Catholic University of São Paulo and Silmar Fernandes, Judge at TJSP and TRESP. Professor of Criminal Law at the Faculty of Law of Mackenzie Presbyterian University and in the Graduate Courses at School of Magistracy of São Paulo.

The monograph discusses the control of conventionality and its applicability to Brazilian Criminal Law, from an analysis of what is effectively understood by control of conventionality, that is, of its concept, legitimacy and mode of implementation or realization. The objective is, therefore, to verify the conditions of its effectiveness, in the light of the legislation, specialized doctrine and jurisprudence. The adopted methodology is the bibliographic and documentary research, of qualitative character. As a result, the article is expected to contribute to the advancement of Law Theory studies focusing specifically on the propaedeutic aspects of Criminal Law and Public International Law.

In our Essays Section we publish 04 (four) essays, 02 (three) essays on public policies: “Between transitional justice and torture: an analysis of authoritarian continuity in the current democratic state of law” and “Judicial activism and instrumentality of the procedure: a dialogue with Georges Abboud and Guilherme Lunelli based on the work of Cândido Rangelinamarco”.

In this issue of the journal, we maintained our body of our referees / reviewers, from countless states in the country and foreign professors, in a total of more than 650 (six hundred and fifty) reviewers. We also publish, for the immediate consultation of readers, the links to the various national and international indexes of journals and periodicals where our Journal Quaestio Iuris is indexed. We thank, as always, all readers, authors, reviewers and collaborators for their collaboration and trust and for the always excellent work done. We always remember that submissions to Journal Quaestio Iuris are permanent and must be made through the system, directly on the journal's page.

Good reading to all!
