The Quaestio Iuris Journal, indexed in the Web of Science, is a quarterly publication. In this volume 17, issue 04, 2024, we are pleased to inform all our readers that our Journal is indexed in several open-source tools used daily by millions of people in universities, companies, and libraries worldwide to discover, connect, and analyze research products. The open-source tools where the Quaestio Iuris Journal is indexed include: FATCAT; ZDB; DOAJ; WEB OF SCIENCE; WIKIDATA; SUDOC; OPENALEX; EZB; and CROSSREF.

We are also pleased to publish the article “The Impact of the Jurisprudence of the Inter-american Court of Human Rights on Mexican Constitutional Justice” by Raúl Montoya Zamora.

This article, “The Impact of the Jurisprudence of the Inter-american Court of Human Rights on Mexican Constitutional Justice”, seeks to explain how the jurisprudence of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights (IACHR) has influenced the evolution of the constitutional and conventional control system in Mexico. It does so through an analysis of key contentious cases, namely the Jorge Castañeda Gutman case and the Rosendo Radilla Pacheco case against Mexico. Additionally, the article offers a prospective examination of the implications of IACHR rulings in the cases of Txompaxtle Tecpile et al. v. Mexico and García Rodríguez et al. v. Mexico in the development of the so-called "conventionality control."

For this study, the following legal methods were applied: dogmatic, exegetical, and case analysis. These methods aim to explain and justify that IACHR jurisprudence has had a positive impact on the evolution of Mexico's constitutional and conventional control system. This impact has undoubtedly resulted in better conditions for national judges to ensure the full effectiveness and enforcement of human rights in cases where individuals report violations by public authorities and private entities.

As in previous issues, in this volume 17, issue 04, 2024, we have published 13 (thirteen) original articles, including 04 (four) international articles: “The Impact of the Jurisprudence of the Inter-american Court of Human Rights on Mexican Constitutional Justice”; “Teleworking: Emergence and Progress in Portugal”; “From Freedom of Expression to Public Opinion in New Spain: The Protection of the New Hispanic Against Despotic Government (1808-1812)”; “Would Aristotle Agree with Abortion and Transgenderism?: The Epistemological Status of the Unscientific and the Illegitimacy of Feminist and LGTBIQ+ Eristic Ideologies as the Steering Wheel of Society's Drift in Theseus' Ship”.

In our Essays Section, we present two public policy studies: “The Issue of Feminism in the Decoloniality of Gender: An Analysis of the Application of the Maria da Penha Law in Cases Involving Trans Women”; “The Right of Children and Adolescents to Participate in Family Mediation Hearings”.

In this issue, we have maintained our extensive network of reviewers, which includes professors from various states in Brazil and international scholars, totaling over 650 (six hundred and fifty) reviewers.

Additionally, we provide immediate access to links for various national and international journal indexing platforms where the Quaestio Iuris Journal is indexed.

We sincerely thank all our readers, authors, reviewers, and contributors for their trust and collaboration, as well as for their consistently excellent work. We remind you that submissions to the Quaestio Iuris Journal are open on a rolling basis and must be made through the journal's online submission system.

Good reading to all!
